2014 Los Angeles County Provider List

L.A. County Government Vendor ID 51963101

There are no state laws that regulate anger management. Neither the LA County Probation Department nor any other agency is involved in certifying anger management programs. The list of probation-approved batterers' intervention programs is solely for domestic violence perpetrators. Domestic violence programs are inappropriate for addressing issues of anger management in non-intimate relationships. Therefore, as a nationally recognized leader in providing interventions, resources, and provider certifications in anger management, Anderson & Anderson has compiled a list of programs currently using validated Pre & Post Tests as well as "Gaining Control of Ourselves", a widely recognized anger management workbook. We do not in any way guarantee the quality of the services provided by any of the businesses listed. A complimentary copy of this publication in English or Spanish will be provided upon request to any officer of the court. For additional information, please contact Anderson & Anderson.

Code of ethics. As a client of any Certified Anger Management Facilitator, you should expect organized, comprehensive, and consistent service, using the most innovative and up-to-date products. Clients are entitled to a pre and post assessment to determine their initial anger and emotional intelligence profile, to identify areas that require skill enhancement, and evaluate progress following the completion of skill-building sessions. After completing the assessment and intake, clients can expect an organized program featuring Anderson & Anderson workbooks and DVDs; materials that will be used during each session to build targeted skills. As a client, you deserve your own take-home Anderson & Anderson workbook to practice these skills. You deserve sessions in person, not online. Your provider should be easily accessible, and have a functioning email, website and telephone number.
